INDEPENDENCE ENGINE COMPANY.

A special meeting of this company was held at Engine Hall last Saturday evening. The meeting was called to order by the foreman and the roll called by the clerk. It was then voted to choose a committee of twelve to make arrangements for the annual ball to be given at the Town Hall, on Friday evening, Jan. 4, 1884, and the following members were chosen to constitute that committee: James Denithorne, Jos. L. Hayden, A. H.
Thayer, Chas. E. Nott, M. Jason, T.
E. McGrath, Henry Brennock, Geo.
Brennon, Tony Joseph, Frank M.
Sherburne, G. B. Mapes, and C. F.
Allen. Voted, That this committee receive no pay for their services.
Voted to use all money in the treasury if necessary to pay the necessary expenses in advance. The following were chosen to serve as Standing Committee of the company until the annual meeting in May, viz.: J. Denithorne, A. H. Thayer, W. T. Tilden, J. L. Hayden, H. T. P. Bates. Voted to adjourn.

Mr. Geo. Zurich, who is well known to many of our citizens as an accomplished Violinist has, at the request of his friends, consented to give a concert at the Town Hall on Friday evening, the 25th inst. Mr. Zurich has selected an orchestra of talented musicians from Boston, and will also be assisted by Mr. Geo. W. Parkman, violin soloist. After the concert, dancing may be enjoyed by those who wish until 4 a.m. Mr. Zurich is very highly spoken of by all who know him, and some excellent music may be expected by all who are fortunate enough to be able to attend this concert. The tickets to the concert have been placed at the low price of 35 cents, and dancing tickets at 75 cents. Following is the program for the concert, and it may be extended if time allows:

PEOPLE'S LECTURE COURSE.

The committee having in charge the lecture course for this winter have secured, with the exception of one date, talent for each entertainment of the course and in order that they may be enabled to ascertain how much money is to be at their disposal for the paying of the necessary expenses, it is very desirable that all who are intending to attend the course should leave their names with the committee or at this office, at their earliest convenience. A very encouraging response to the circular of the committee which was distributed last week, has already been received, and a good number of season tickets have been engaged. It should be remembered that the entertainments will be instructive to the young people as well as to their parents and in order to give the school children an opportunity to attend, the system of issuing scholars' season tickets at $1 each has been adopted. The talent which has been engaged is all of a high order and should receive the support which it deserves. Owing to the installation of officers of the K. of H.
League which is to take place Jan. 10, the committee, not desiring to interfere with other entertainments, have decided to change the date of the first concert, by the Carter Concert Troupe, to Tuesday evening, Jan. 8, instead of Jan. 10, as before announced. Tickets to the course will probably be ready for delivery about the 20th instant.

Since writing the above we have received from the committee a list of the dates and talents so far as engaged, which we publish below.

Company, Prof. Madison Oliver,

ACCIDENT ON THE OLD COLONY.

A slight accident occurred Monday the 20th inst., on the Old Colony Railroad at Atlantic. The train which leaves South Braintree at 5:55 o'clock in the morning was twenty-five minutes late in starting at Atlantic. It switches off on a side track, to allow the Steamboat train from Fall River to Boston to pass. Monday morning the Steamboat train arrived at Atlantic before the other train had backed all of the cars on the side track. The tracks were so wet and slippery that the engine struck one of the passenger cars of the South Braintree train, tipping it partly over, so that it left the track; no serious damage was done; however, neither to the car or engine, and the steamboat train continued on to Boston with the same engine that collided with the car. A short delay in the running of regular trains was all that affected the road and no one was injured.

Dea. G. E. Bailey and wife, Rev. T.
W. Sheppard, Miss S. T. Bailey and Dea. C. E. Bailey attended the dedication of the new chapel at the South Marsfield Baptist Church, Tuesday, Rev. Mr. Shepard preached the sermon.

The choir connected with the Baptist Church have been having rehearsals, not only in singing, but in pleasant conversation and eating. Saturday evening they met with their leader, Mr. D. H. Stoddard, where they were treated to coffee and other good things. Wednesday evening they met at the residence of Dea. G. E. Bailey, and after the service Mr. and Mrs. Bailey treated the choir to lemonade and fruit drinks, and iced tea. Call and friends are cordially welcomed and many are seen the pretty things.

The fair held by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Unitarian Church, on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week, was very largely attended and many articles for the holidays were sold.
The entertainment, the second evening drew out the larger number, and all were well paid for.

Jobbing has been unusually good at this office during the past month. We note this fact for the benefit of those who like to ascertain how it is being supported by our town's people. Yet, we may say there are some who still go out of town to get their printing done, when they can get just as good work done at this office and at as reasonable prices.

At the Probate Court held at Plymouth Monday, administration was granted to Francis P. Lewis of Rockland on the estate of Isaac C. Nightingale of Scituate; Aaron Pratt of Litchfield
of Scituate; Aaron Pratt of Litchfield of Scituate. A complaint was filed against the trustees of the will of Josiah Damon of Scituate. No agreement was reached and the case was continued.

We have heard nothing but praise and commendation for the Rural Improvement Society for the good work being done under their management, and on our sidewalks, with one exception, when a person expressed themselves rather bluntly that "it was all one man's doing," because a portion of the work had been done in front of his residence, while really he had done nothing toward helping the cause. But the talk seems to point to the fact that no sidewalk had been made in front of her house.

We have often thought that it would be very convenient to have our post office kept open during the noon hour so as to when we have seen people waiting to get in, but we never realized the convenience of it. It will be quite a time before the mail will be delivered to our post office, but we did not go for the mail until our way to dinner, when the office was closed, and as we took the noon train

TURNING GRAY.

"Life's sands are running fast away;
The buoyant step of youth is gone;
The falling hair is turned gray;
The heart that was so bold is gone.
More quickly than in days of yore—Before the heart became its prey—Twas seduced to the core—
The hair was quite so gray.

Yes, turning gray! Age comes like snow, As still, and carries each care worn.
It's wrinkled, thin, and white, and slow;
A hair that with a silver streaks will shine.
The eyes brighten less; the hand Grows dry and tremulous and thin—For life, as I surely spanned, And dealt its gales soon closes in.

Ah, turning gray. Who could tell The sign how long with time we're been To pass? The secret of life is to live, At the source we have seen;
So feel the heart beats like a heart More quickly cluster on our head;
And autumn rain-drops hang like tears On some fair flower that's nearly dead.

Like perished petals from the bower, Our hopes and wildest joys are laid—Sweet gambols by the fancy played—As love comes on us long, forrest.
As saints near shrines will long pray, But still we love that time the heart Before the hair is turning gray."

A HUSBAND'S JEALOUSY.

"Oh, Aunt Jessica! you know I don't mean any harm; but Phil is so foolishly jealous, he deserves to be tormented now and then, by way of a punishment. The dear old fellow! just as if I could think twice of any other man from the first hour I ever saw him! There is no one to compare with my darling Phil, and he ought to know it. I am sure I have told him enough times to satisfy any ordinary mortal!"

"My dear, actions sometimes speak louder than words."

The first speaker was a dainty bit of femininity curled up in a cushioned chair, a wan doll-like fairy, with pink-tinted complexion, delicate features, and great big blue eyes; the second, a pale-eyed, genteel-looking elderly lady, the chaste, subdued look of whose face spoke the lingering shadow of some great trouble.

"But, oh, aunt, you should have seen Phil the other night when I smiled upon Dame Stanhope, and he came and sat beside me. He looked fairly awful, and I thought I should die laughing behind my fan to see him glaring upon us."

Still more sorrowful looking gazed those soft eyes of the elderly lady, as she gently reproved her frivolous—nay, thoughtless niece.

"My dear it pains me to hear you speak thus lightly of death; yet, at your age, I too might have spoken in that way; but to those who have wandered further along in the path of life, and stood face to face with the grim monster, the very mention of death or dying in future years will bring a shudder with it. Lillie, darling, sit down beside me. I have a story to relate to you."

"With pleasure, auntie. There, I like to see you here so, my head resting against your knee, then I can look into your kind, good-face—the face of the only mother I ever knew."

Tenderly the soft hand of Aunt Jessica rested upon the bright, golden head of Lillie, as if in benediction, ere she began:

"Thirty-five years ago, there lived in a quiet country village, a young girl about your age, Lillie, and who was called beautiful. Unquestionably had passed the years of her life, with a widow mother, in a sweet little cottage of their own, until she reached her eighteenth year. Her pretty face attracted the attention of an elderly gentleman of wealth. Had he been a young man, and untouched as her heart had been by love, she could never have learned to care for him—his face was too passionate, dark and forbidding; but trouble came. Death removed her kind and indulgent mother, and it was soon ascertained that the cottage must be sold for debt."

"Then came the temptation; her elderly lover hovered near her, begging her to accept his love and wealth. She felt that she was so unloved to battle with the world, and finally yielded to his persuasions. They were married, and for a year or two the young wife could not say that she was unhappy with a husband who seemed to adore her, surrounding her with every luxury his wealth could lavish upon her, giving her the benefit of travel, and every pleasure in his power.

"Her husband owned an elegant yacht; and as they both enjoyed the water, during the summer months a greater portion of their time was spent yachting.

"The captain was a young giant, handsome and pleasing, a dangerous man to be near the young wife, whose heart had never known the meaning of love. Alas! wrong as they both knew it to be, soon they were all the world to each other, although each had, until one fatal evening, guarded the secret from the other most carefully.

They had been standing together for some time, he at the wheel steering the beautiful craft over the glittering waste, she standing near him, listening in rapt silence to his eloquent and masterful conversation. The sun neared the horizon, the great ball of fire dipped below, and was lost to sight. The dew was falling heavily, and suddenly and forcibly breaking the spell which had held her enthralled, the young wife declared she must go into the cabin or she would catch cold.

"The twilight was upon them. Those of the crew who were on deck were employed forward. The husband was supposed by both to be in the cabin, fast asleep upon one of the luxuriant couches. They picked up their maniacal master, but their eyes never again rested upon their beloved captain.

"The yacht crew witnessed the sinking of the boat, and were greatly surprised at the accident, quickly manned a boat, and started upon one of the luxuriant couches.

"A sudden impulse, that for the first time was not mastered, staled upon the young captain, and he drew the golden head to his breast, and imprinted one passionate kiss upon the lips of another man's wife. She did not return the caress. Another man's wife! Like lightning the thought came upon him, and he gently put her from him, and deliberately turned his face from her.

"Wretched and degraded the young woman felt, even when she thought no human eye rested upon them but those feelings gave place to deepest horror, when her terrified eyes caught the glimpse of it vanished among the rigging, of a white set face, and boldly gleaming eyes—the face of the man to whom she had given herself without one atom of love in her heart for him.

"Shivering, and trying to persuade herself that this vision was only a trick of imagination, she crept down in the cabin and hid her face in the cushions of the couch. Silent and motionless she remained there for nearly an hour. Then, steps were nearing her, and raising her head she encountered the smiling face of her husband."

"My darling, you have been a better safe-guard than I. You love your husband, but you may not know what extent his love and jealousy may lead him. Be warned in time, for no good can ever come of this tormenting your kind and loving husband."

"Dearest, kindest aunt, I will be good in future. I know I should do something terrible if I seemed to care for the society of any one else, and I—I never once gave it a thought that he might feel the same way."

You have had Enough?

When a man has broken his farm, house and furniture—a when he has ruined his wife, beggar his children and lost his home, when is it too disposed to find employment, too worthless to obtain a situation; when no one can trust him, when no man is willing to treat him to a drink, when every resource has failed and life has become a curse, and he stands before the liquor dealer's bar and begs for a drink to quench his thirst and quiet for an hour the hell of torment that rages within him, then the house has come; and as the liquor dealer throws him out in the cold and darkness he says to him: "You have had enough".

He may plead, but he may expostulate, but in vain.

"You have had enough?"

So long as he had in his pocket a dollar or dime, he had not "had enough"; but when he has spent all, and comes for charity to the man who has robbed and ruined him, he makes this stereotyped answer:

"You have had enough."

While his money lasts he may drink as he will; but when money is gone and all is gone he has had enough.

Young man, entering upon a course of dissipation you may know when you have had enough. When you are a broken-down penniless wretch the rum-seller will give you the information. He informs you have had enough and you can then crawl into your grave in the potter's field; you have had enough."

MARSHFIELD.

The new chapel built by the Society of the South Baptist Church, Rev. J. N. Studley, parson, was dedicated on Tuesday last. The dedicatory program was made in the church, and the remainder of the exercises were held in the parsonage. This service was given to the society by Mrs. C. M. Magoun in memory of her sister, Mrs. Holmes. The parsonage has also been remodeled.

There will be a meeting of the South Shore Farmers' Club at Agricultural Hall, Saugus, Dec. 15, at 2 o'clock, for the choice of officers, after which the subject of corn fodder will be discussed. All are invited.

EAST MARSHFIELD.

At the regular monthly meeting of the East Marshfield Library Association, the proposition to procure catalogues for the use of its members was taken up and adopted. This long felt want will doubtless be supplied before the next meeting, which occurs on the first Thursday in January.

Rev. Dr. Lane of this village preached in the Methodist church on Sunday last.

Miss Eva K. Hatch fills the position made vacant by the resignation of Miss Baker, as teacher in the primary department of the school in this village.

Rev. Otis L. Leonard, whose work as an evangelist both at home and abroad, has been attended with marked success, was at home on Thanksgiving day. In the evening he officiated at the marriage ceremony of Mr. Israel H. Oakman and Miss Fannie T. Damon.

SEA VIEW.

Mr. Geo. Randall who has been in poor health for some months past has gone to Boston to spend the winter, hoping the change will be beneficial.

Many of the older inhabitants of Marshfield will remember Mr. John P. Tilden, who left this town for the west 45 years ago. Mr. Tilden settled in Peoria, Ill., where he has since resided. The first of the present month he was the victim of a disastrous attack which came very near terminating fatally.

On that day Mr. Tilden had paid him $700, which he deposited in the bank between 8:30 and 9 o'clock. He went to the front door to look out, and while opening the outside blind door, he received a heavy charge from a shot gun in his left arm. Mr. Tilden saw the would-be assassin, and turned to get his gun, but on reaching it he discovered that his arm was entirely useless, and the assailant escaped. The injury to Mr. Tilden's arm was so severe that amputation above the elbow was necessary. At first it was feared that he, being 73 years of age, would succumb to the shock and the loss of blood, but his condition is now steadily improving.

NORTH MARSHFIELD.

SILVER WEDDING.

The most attractive silver wedding that was ever held in this place was that of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. G. White at their residence in North Marshfield. Festal lights illuminated the elegant mansion in every part, reflecting joy and splendor to every passer-by. The wedding had been a topic of interest for some time past and the house was crowded by the relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. White who happily responded to invitations to be present and celebrate the 25th anniversary of their marriage. There were about 150 present including those from the immediate vicinity and by special invitation the Unique Club of Scituate. Dancing and games were the principle enjoyment of the evening. Mr. and Mrs. White were the happy recipients of numerous and costly presents which attracted a good deal of attention. During the first part of the evening Mr. White was presented, in behalf of the Unique Club, by Mr. Rev. R. Turner, a beautiful silver cake basket. Mr. Turner making a fine presentation speech, which was responded to by Mr. White. At about 10 o'clock a summons came to ascend to the dining room where a sumptuous collation was served. The occasion was one highly enjoyed by all present, and at about 11 o'clock the party began to leave for their several homes after making the happy couple a good night.

Your correspondent had the privilege of attending the wedding on Thanksgiving night at the house of Mr. Granville D. Damon and witnessing the ceremony which made two happy young people one. Mr. Israel H. Damon and Miss Fannie T. Damon. The evening was very happy and spent. The house was filled with invited guests, young and old, ranging in age from 3 to 90 years. The ceremony was performed by the Evangla-licious Rev. O. L. Leonard, former pastor of the bride. Mr. Charlie A. Damon acted as groomsman and Miss Eva K. Hatch as bridesmaid. The bride had a number of very fine presents. A sumptuous collation of ice cream, cake and fruit, was served, to which the large company present did ample justice. The newly married pair have our warmest congratulations.

SOUTH SCITUATE.

Don't forget the Christmas ball at the town hall.

Joseph Harvie, who "disappeared from the almshouse, has been heard from, he having walked from this place to Boston, and is now staying with his parents.

The general verdict is that the barber shop is an institution which is being well patronized. Mr. McGrath, the proprietor, is well satisfied with his venture and is having a good run of custom.

The County Commissioners visited town last week and issued out the road from the land of David Griffith to the wood lot of Israel Nash on Central street.

This will be a big improvement.

A greater part of this will be entirely off the old road bed which was erected.

Masters Cornhill and Studley spend some of their time with the new larger getting points in the trade. They have already procured one razor, and as far as heard from have practiced upon each other's tools in order to get to their hands in. George thinks in a a few weeks they can open an opposition shop. Look Shiner that he don't cut your throat.

The house of Mr. Israel Nash at Wellesley Hills was visited by burgars during the early part of the evening of the day before Thanksgiving, while the family were at tea. Mrs.

Nash noticed a smell of kerosene, and as they do not use oil she supposed the smell came in through an open window, and requested her son Arthur to go up stairs and close the same.

Upon entering the room he was astonished to find a burglar, with a dark lantern busily engaged in ransacking the bureau drawer. He immediately stared for his gun, and returned in time to fire a couple of shots at the burglar. In their flight they left a ladder standing up against the house.

They succeeded in getting away with about $300 worth of property.

CURCH HILL.

The ladies of the Union Social Circle of West Scituate, hold a sale of Christmas goods on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 12 and 13, in their hall.

The first of the present month he was the victim of a disastrous attack which came very near terminating fatally.

paid him $700, which he deposited in the bank between 8:30 and 9 o'clock.

door, he received a heavy charge from a shot gun in his left arm.

and turned to get his gun, but on reaching it he discovered that his arm was entirely useless, and the assailant escaped.
